RESPONSE TO DEBTORS' OBJECTION TO STOCK OWNERSHIP CLAIMS

Name of Court: United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware
Name of Debtors: Advanta Corp, et al
Case Number: 09-13931 (KJC)

Title of Objection: Debtors' First Omnibus Objection to Stock Ownership Claims
(Non-Substantive)

Name of Claimant: Teresa E. George
Claim Number: 1309
Basis for Amount of Claim: Cost of Stock at $10.11 per share x 1000 shares
Amount of Claim: $10,110.00
Proof of Claim: Filed 4/30/2010

Factual Basis/Legal Argument: Advanta failed to offer to buy back company stock from shareholders prior to publicly announcing company's impending collapse, thus causing stock value to plummet, and leaving shareholders holding worthless stock.

Supporting Documentation of Proof of Claim: Statement from Stock Brokerage

ADDITIONAL EXPLANATION:

In Exhibit A of the Omnibus Objection I notice that my claim is listed FOUR times. Perhaps this is because I was sent numerous claim forms – which gave me the impression that they needed to be resubmitted – or that perhaps extra copies were needed – but I can see that they just entered each duplicate copy as a new claim – even though I noted on each duplicate copy that the claim had already been submitted.

Also, on the original claim and its duplicate copy someone doubled the amount of the claim – the doubled amount does not appear on anything that I submitted – I do not know who doubled it or why it was doubled.

I have only ONE claim against Advanta – please disregard all but one of the claims. Use Claim #1309 in the amount of $10,110 and disregard the rest.

Perhaps this happened to others as well and Advanta does not owe as much as is noted in the total column of Exhibit A.

As far as the factual basis and legal argument for the claim, Advanta should have known that publicly announcing that the company had been mismanaged and thus was filing bankruptcy would make the stock worthless. Advanta has a duty to protect its shareholders and not leave them holding worthless stock. Advanta has a duty to make its shareholders whole before dissolving the company.

I also have a credit card with Advanta. Advanta said it closed all accounts so that consumers could no longer make charges. I have a balance on that account of around $8,000. If Advanta does not want to reimburse for the stock investment that they caused to fail – in my case $10,110 – they could write off my credit card balance, and would then only owe me about $2,000. That is another way in which this matter could be handled.
